A version of the original 16mm film was blown-up to 35 mm and screened at several film festivals and via an Australian tour in 1995 (with a score largely written by Jen Anderson and performed live by Anderson, Mick Thomas and Mark Wallace). Based on C.J. Dennis' popular poems, the film follows the ups and downs of Bill (aka The Bloke), a larrikin from the Sydney dockside suburb of Woolloomooloo. The story begins with Bill receiving a six-month sentence after having been caught in a two-up game. When he is released Bill meets and falls for Doreen, an upright young woman who works in a pickle factory. She makes him renounce drinking, gambling and running with the local 'push' (or gang) and they eventually marry. Although it's still clear that he's not yet fully reformed, the love of a good woman has helped him find a future.

Vivian Bullwinkel: An Australian Heroine

(2007 documentary)

Waterbyrd Films/Australian Broadcasting Corporation/Film Victoria

Director Nicholas Bird and Eleanor Sharpe • Producer Nicholas Bird • Writers Dennis Smith and Eleanor Sharpe • Music Jen Anderson

Cast: Megan Rees (Young Vivian Bullwinkel) • Jan Frasier (Eva Bullwinkel) • John Stanton (narrator)

This documentary chronicles the extraordinary life and legacy of Vivian Bullwinkel, the brave Australian nurse who survived one of the worst atrocities committed against women during the second world war. While films such as Paradise Road and the BBC television series Tenko have fictionalised the story of female POWs held by the Japanese, none have attempted to depict the brutality of the Bangka Island massacre. This documentary is the first attempt to tell the story of Vivian Bullwinkel and the Australian nurse POWs.
